WRITING REVIEWS

Chappell reveals a playwright's fine intellect and an appetite to write out on a limb – Theatreview

Chappell's writing reveals a clearly defined voice and an instinctive understanding of story structure... it's wildly imaginative story telling – The New Zealand Herald

Chappell isn't just, a fine performer, she's a barbarous wordsmith as well – Lisa Thatcher

I was blown away which is a credit to her both as a writer and as a performer – Kick Arts

This little gem is a very original, rather absurd comedy with darker undertones of tragic lost love – Theatre Arts Guide

The show is entertaining, engaging, hilarious, yet quite heart-breaking. – Australian Stage Review

A work that entertains, fascinates and connects on many levels. It takes the audience on an emotional roller coaster ride, we laugh and cry, and laugh again – Suzy Goes See

Lisa Chappell delivers a black comedy that is drunk on schizophrenia, but garnished with humour and some marvellous witticisms – Keeping Up With New Zealand

These giant themes about time, control, quality of life and the relationship between past, present and future form the crazy, abstract plot of Lisa Chappell's latest play and leave the laughing audience wide-eyed in wonder... another witty, absurd Chappell script that lucky Sydney-siders are starting to expect from the talented actress – Lisa Thatcher

AWARDS:

2009 Auckland Theatre Company – The Next Stage Winner for Don't Hold Your Breath
